THE WORLD'S SERIES

By Frank G. Menke, International News Service

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—No clearer or more positive illustration of the extraordinary interest taken by the public in the annual world's championship series of baseball games can be desired than that furnished by a glance at the financial results, a statement of which is officially announced at the end of each post-season competition for the coveted title and flag. Through the box office its popularity can be easily measured. Compared with the meagre returns at the initial series in 1884 the enormous crowds registered by the clicking turnstiles show that by leaps and bounds the attendance in recent years has assumed such gigantic proportions that there is no telling what it may amount to in years to come.

In 1887, when Detroit and St. Louis played fourteen games in nearly a dozen cities, the receipts amounted to $42,000, about $2,000 a game, which was then considered a large amount. The following year $24,362 was taken in for the ten games played by New York and St. Louis. The first year of the Temple Cup series, 1894, four games were played and average per game was $4,500 at Baltimore and

New York. There was a falling off a year later, when the Cleveland-Baltimore series of five games realized only $14,750.
In 1903, when the first series was played between the pennant-winning teams of the National and American leagues, eight games brought a little over $50,000. There was no contest in 1904, but a year later there was an advance in the prices of admission and $65,495 was taken in for five games at Philadelphia and New York, but the attendance fell to 51,723 as compared with over 100,000 two years previously. The attendance dropped to $3,000 in 1908 for the Chicago-Detroit series, but the receipts jumped to nearly $95,000.

A marked increase in attendance and receipts was registered in 1909, when 145,285 persons paid $188,362 to see the seven-game series between Pittsburgh and Detroit. Philadelphia and Chicago played five games in 1910, before 124,322 persons with gate receipts of $173,930, and this amount was almost doubled the following year when 175,851 persons contributed $342,164 to see the Philadelphia and New York series of six games. This was a mighty jump, but it was eclipsed in 1912, the banner year for attendance and financial results. The Boston Americans and New York Nationals played eight games, one of them resulting in a tie, that year, and it was estimated that a quarter of a million spectators saw the protracted series, which drew $490,445. This enormous increase was, of course, due to the extra games that were required but last year when only five games were needed to settle the questioning supremacy between the Giants and Athletics, $235,980 was paid in with an attendance of 151,000. The average receipts per game in 1912 was $61,266, while the average last year was increased to $65,196.

Each of the winning players on the winning side in 1903, the first year that the series was played under the conditions which now prevail, received $1,216.25 and each of the losing players got $1,182. In 1912 the Boston winners received $4,022 each and the New York losers were handed $2,566 each. Last year each player of the Athletics got a winning portion of $3,242.36 and the losing share for each New York player was $2,164.22.

Details of attendance and division of the receipts each year since 1903 are appended:

Year	Attendance	Receipts	Club's Share	Players' Share	National Com.
1903	109,429	$50,000	$17,388	$32,612
1905	91,723	68,405	34,170	27,394	$ 6,841
